

Saba's life

Saba was an everyday teenager doing his homework eating sleeping all of that good stuff... at least that's what you would think

Mom: I told you he has to train his mind he has to become a scientist

Dad: NO! He and his "friend" is getting bullied in school every single day your STUPID learning won't save HIS DAMN LIFE

Saba wanted to be a story writer because in 2017 he played a game about literature and that game was very emotional to him

That game had a character in the same situation as him but she never won she lost after all of that work all of that struggle to get control she never did

Saba wanted to give that story a better ending he tried to do everything his parents said as well as make a good story

He learnt science physics and ICT by reading books and saying exactly the same thing that he read even if the way he wanted to learn is by listening to others

He also trained with his father even when his hand broke when he started bleeding even when he didn't have anything left to give

He went to school and tried to save his friend Sandro from getting bullied but he lost to those bullies every single time because they were working as a team knocking him around like a punching bag he didn't have potential to keep up with them all

In the night he would take his computer and start writing the story he tried to make the literature story better and give it a good ending

He wrote it but it didn't work

He wrote it again but it still didn't seem right

He wrote again but he didn't see the payoff

He wrote again and again and again

He couldn't keep it all up he was getting weaker because he didn't sleep physically and mentally

His father and his mother abused him because they thought he wasn't trying hard enough so they made it harder and harder and harder

One day Saba heard that they would... get divorced

Saba was happy after all of that pain he would finally get enough time to do it all

But it was actually a myth a lie they gave him hope but they never left each other because they thought they had to "take care" of their son

When Saba heard this... he snapped

In the middle of the night he left his house and went to another building he went up with an elevator up to the 16th floor and looked at the view

He knew what he wanted to do

This was his final words

I wish I had a soul so when I would die I would go to haven,
They made me believe I had a choice when I actually didn't.

He closed his eyes and jumped off the building after opening his eyes he woke up in bed but it wasn't his he woke up in a house but it wasn't his he woke up in a world that wasn't his he was teleported to the literature game he felt like this was his destiny he could save everyone's life he would be friends with the character that he loved and nothing would stop him anymore because this was a game world but he was wrong nothing changed he still got a bad ending

His new friends killed themselves over and over and over because the character was always trying to get control and finally interact with Saba she made him care less about others and like her more by hurting her and Saba's friends in the process

Saba's friends still had connection to Saba that was the reason every time she would do this to him he would get hurt

After trying this many times he wrote a poem and gave it to the character and it had this to say:

I climbed a mountain multiple times
The first time I climbed the mountain
It was getting harder and harder to climb up it
But I still tried even after I bled and suffered
But in the end I found out the truth
No matter how hard I would try
In the end I would either see void of darkness
Or slip off of it and fail at climbing it
I jumped off of the mountain I was climbing to since I was born
But then I got a second choice climb another mountain
I climbed up it but it was a lot more painful to do it
But since I thought it was my only other chance
I didn't give up and climbed

In the end of it I saw a void of darkness pushing me off of it
Please listen to me
No matter what you do even create your own mountain
You won't see the sunrise Unless you won't build a mountain with the corpses of our friends

She understood the meaning of the poem and never tried to hurt anyone because she didn't have a choice to get what she wanted

She learnt even if she would try it a million times

She would never get a perfect ending by hurting others

She understood they had a connection and he felt the same pain

There was no bad end in sight

He finally got a friend who understood him

He cried in happiness looking at the sunrise

After all this pain all this struggle all this jumps all this slips

He closed his eyes

He opened his eyes

He was still falling from the sky

The last words he has ever said was:

I wish I had a soul

The End

The End

The End

The End

The End

The End

The end

